Commercial Value of Gold and Silver

The following article is from the Commercial Herald and Weekly Review, the new commercial paper lately started in San Francisco

Gold and silver, though used as the standard measuring and regulating all other values themselves exempt from the effects of the ordinary law of demand and supply, any marked increase of these metals advancing the prices of all other marketable commodities, or in other words, working a depreciation of their own value, which compared with what it was twenty years ago, has declined nearly one half Gold coin only is scarcely worth one third as much as it was at the beginning of the present century, nor the twentieth part of what it was two or three hundred years ago It is customary, however to express this idea by saying that the prices of other commodities have advanced rather than that the worth of the precious metals has declined the practical result, however expressed, amounting to the same thing There are two well known epochs in history which mark the commencement of large accessions to the treasure stock of the world, these being the discovery of the Western Continent and the finding of Gold in California Following soon after the first came a large augmentation of the store of specie then existing in Europe arousing a spirit of enterprise and infusing into commerce an activity such as had never existed before This new state of things created such numerous openings for the employment of additional capital, that this influx of Gold failed sensibly to disturb existing prices for nearly eighty years, nor was it until more than a century and a quarter had elapsed after the discovery of America, and the Gold and Silver of Europe had multiplied six fold, of dollars, that these metals fell to about one third of their former value. That they did not decline in the same ratio with their increase, is accounted for by the fact that large quantities of money were absorbed by the greater activity and new necessities of the age The entire amount of the precious metals existing in 1848, the era of the Gold discovery in California is computed at $8 500,000 000, the annual addition as since being set down at $250,000 000, a rather high estimate Still, assuming it to be correct, it follows that but thirty four years from that date will be required to double the world's treasure an end that should therefore be accomplished in 1882 working meantime a rise in the prices prevailing at the commencement of this period equivalent to one hundred per cent —that is, on the supposition that this would take place in the same ratio with the increase of the precious metals But while there has been a great advance in the price of almost every kind of property and commodity throughout the civilized world, there has also usually been some corresponding with the additions made to the stock of Gold and Silver during this date, much of the capital resulting from so great an increment of bullion having kept pace with absorption in the commercial activity and industrial enterprise of the age Never in the history of the race has there been a time when capital was so strongly directed into new fields of adventure, or so urgently required for speculative and utilitarian uses In the sixteenth, three fold the treasure store of the preceding century was absorbed by the growing wants of that period, without much disturbing prices, which were essentially advanced only after the lapse of fifty years, when the treasure supply of the world had been increased six fold Instructed by the experience of the past, we infer that the doubling of the specie of both continents since 1848 will do little more than meet the growing demands that have kept almost even pace with these new supplies, postponing any marked reduction in the exchangeable value of gold and silver to a period so remote that present speculations in regard to it possesses but little interest

Besides the capacity of enlightened nations to receive and commercially assimilate the increased product of their mines, and the demand that exists for purposes of ornamentation and use in the fine arts, large quantities of gold and silver will yet be needed to meet the requirements likely to grow out of a more intimate and extended intercourse with the populous countries of insular and continental Asia, whose political situation and financial necessities, as well as the religious customs and the semi barbaric tastes of their people, will yet open an immense mart for the disposal of these metals The excessive production of gold during the past eighteen years has tended to lessen its value among Western nations, it having depreciated two and a half per cent as compared with silver, hence it will be substituted for the latter in Europe and America, though the Asiatics will probably continue us at present to give a preference to silver as a medium of exchange, thereby tending to maintain an equilibrium in the value of these metals the world over Should money ever come to be distributed among the countless hordes of the Orient in anything like the same profusion as among European nations, the yield of our mines might for years flow in that direction without more than partially effecting that purpose, for which not less than twelve or fifteen billions of dollars would be required And although it is not to be expected that the fiscal condition of these races, whose wants and means are alike so restricted, can ever be raised to an equality with those of more enlightened peoples, still the ease with which they can in most cases earn money, coupled with their well known love of silver both for sacred and personal uses, renders it probable that they will with their multitudinous numbers be able, when more intimate commercial relations shall be established amongst them, to absorb vast quantities of this metal Viewing our monetary future in all its aspects, we need indulge no apprehensions that even the present immense increase of bullion will fail to find an outlet, or that it will violently and unduly inflate prices, or work any other serious disturbance in the social or commercial world

DEATH ON A VOWEL.—A single slip on the unlucky but popular tragedy of Cato cost a little Welsh actor his life His name was Williams. Playing Decius to Aum's Cato, at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre, in 1718, he entered with, Cæsar sends health to Cato," but he pronounced the last name affectedly, mincing it into something like 'Keeto" Quin, who gave a broad, classical enunciation to the letter o in the word, was offended, and instead of replying—

Could he send it

To Cato a slaughtered friends, it would be welcome,

he exclaimed, Would he had sent a better messenger!" The fiery little Welshman was burning with rage and when Cato resumed with—"Are not your orders to address the Senate?" he could hardly reply, My business is with '—it would come—' Keeto" Ten times in the short scene he had to repeat the name, and Quin nearly as often but the latter gave it a broad sound and delivered it with a significant look which almost shook the little actor off his feet, and did shake all the sides of the house with mexting uishable laughter When they met in the green room, the Welshman, triply armed by having just ground off a epigram, assailed Quin for reading him ridiculous in the eyes of the audience Quin said it was in their ears and would have laughed the matter off But the soul of Williams would not stoop to such treatment, and after the play he laid in wait for Quin, under the Piazza, as Cato passed that way to take his punch The older actor laughed as Williams drew his sword and bade Quin to defend himself The latter would have sustained the defiance with his cane, but the angry Welshman thrust so fiercely that the other was fain to draw his rapier, which speedily, without malice or intention on the part of the wielder passed clear through the player's body Deeper was stretched dead on the pavement and Cato looked bewildered Here was a man slain, and all for the mispronunciation of a vowel! The tragedy brought Quin to the bar of the Old Bailey but the catastrophe was laid rather to the fashion of wearing swords than to the drawing of them with evil purpose and Quin was freed from censure but not from memories

In 1796 Josephine, before consenting to marry Napoleon, consulted her notary, M Raguideau, upon the propriety of her marrying this soldier The notary opposed it It is madness, said he, to marry an officer of fortune, and with no bright future before him" Napoleon heard from Josephine the notary's opinion The day of Napoleon's coronation and before he set out for Notre Dame (he was arrayed in the coronation robes), he said 'Bring Raguideau to me" As soon as Napoleon saw the notary enter the Tuileries, he bawled to him "Ih, Raguideau! do you still think I am a poor officer of fortune—with no bright future before me?" Poor Raguideau began to tremble Napoleon added "I make you my family notary."

In Ireland and Scotland.

Mr L N Cook, State Treasurer of Oregon, writes to his family here a very interesting letter, dated Glasgow June 12, and Liverpool, June [illegible] detail of the movements of the party [illegible] Mr and Mrs T S Smith, in their [illegible] through Ireland and Scotland, describing [illegible] and objects of historic interest [illegible] visited

Leaving Cork [illegible] ed through the counties Cork, Limerick, Tipperary Kilkinny Queens, Kildare, Wicklow and Meath, Dublin Si visiting the best part of the South [illegible] country possessing lordly palaces and castles occupied by noblemen and gentry and thatched clay huts as homes for the tenants and hirelings

The people are to be seen [illegible] rags and are often miserably poor, and ragged and filthy Yet it is described as a splendid country In company with a fellow passenger, an Irishman, they met in Dublin, they visited Trinity Co St Patrick's Cathedral and other [illegible] churches, the tombs of Curran, O'Connor Dean Swift, the cemeteries, parks and grounds, bank and Parliament House, the of the nobility residing near Dublin, and many other places of historic interest Dublin with its 500,000 inhabitants and memorials of antiquity, afford a most interesting field for observation.

They saw the field where Brian Boru fell before the Danes more than eight centuries since, the ruins of St Mary's Chapel and Abbey, founded by Sitric, the Dane, in the eleventh century, and from the Hill of Howth, where the Druidical relics are yet found, they had a fine view of the Irish coast

On the Sabbath they attended St Patrick's Cathedral of the established Church, and a Wesleyan Chapel, where Mr Smith addressed the Sabbath School with happy effect

From Dublin to Belfast, through the counties of Meath, Dublin, South, Armagh, Down, and Antrim, across the Boyne and its beautiful valley, by Loch Neagh, past old castles and ancient ruins, they traversed the North of Ireland, and came to the commercial city of Belfast, which is laid out in modern style, and possesses many buildings devoted to education as well as trade Here they embarked for Glasgow, a city with 430 000 inhabitants and of great manufacturing importance In sailing up the Clyde to reach Glasgow, the ears stunned by the sound of many hammers riveting iron plates for the boilers of immense steamers constantly being constructed on its banks Glasgow, with its manufactories finds work for many thousands of people, who appear happy and contented After visiting the objects of interest about Glasgow, the party went to Ayr, the land of Burns.

Mr Cooke is a lover of the Scotch bard, and quotes him with happy effect as he visits his home upon the Scottish coast The "twa brigs" are still there across the river, the "auld brig" was built in 1210, and is good for centuries to come Tam O'Shanter is recalled by the localities mentioned in the story. "Alloway's auld haunted kirk" is visited, and the cottage where Burns was born. Bonny Doon becomes a thing that memory recalls, and by it stands Burns a monument, in a beautifully enclosed and cultivated acre of the spot he loved.

They returned to Glasgow through the beautiful villages of Ayrshire, alive with manufactures The history of Robert Bruce, William Wallace, and other heroes of Scottish story, came before them as they traversed the scenes they lived among and rendered immortal

From Liverpool—after visiting the Highlands—a pencil note is added, with a promise of particulars of the journey among the lakes Lomond Katrine and the Trossachs, to Stirling Castle and Edinburg, Abbotsford and Melrose Abbey.

"At the distance of about one hundred steps from the place of execution Maximilian left his carriage, and went with a firm and natural step to the point designed. Miramon and Mejia approached in the same manner, though the latter with an expression of sadness on account of his wife, who had become a maniac.

"Maximilian asked who were those ordered to shoot him, and handed an ounce to each of them Being placed between Miramon and Mejia he embraced them both and said to Miramon 'A gallant man is respected by his enemies—allow me to yield to you the place of honor' He then made Miramon take the center, and thus addressed those present 'Mexicans! the persons of my class and origin are named by God either to make their people happy, or die as martyrs Called by a part of you, I came for the welfare of this country It was not ambition which made me come, but the sincere desire to forward the prosperity of my adopted fatherland, and that of its valiant sons, to whom, before I die, I express my gratitude for all their sacrifices Mexicans! may my blood be the last shed by you, and may it regenerate this unfortunate country'

"Having thus spoken, he inclined himself and asked the blessing of the priest. He lifted his eyes to heaven, advanced one step, and quietly awaited death, indicating his breast with his hands.

"Maximilian made over by his testament the sum of $19,000 000, to be divided between the families of the Generals and other persons Before he died he was informed that Charlotte was dead, which made him exclaim 'Even in this Heaven has favored me' To the family of Miramon he left $50,000, and desires Francis Joseph to educate as his own sons those sons worthy of a hero, to the last his most faithful friend"

WINES.—A late visitor at Napoleon's tomb in St Helena, writes "I turned away from house and tomb with deeper conviction than ever of 'the vanity of man as mortal' Who would not? And that death from! How the last words linger about which Napoleon uttered on it, from a crushed and bleeding heart 'General Bertrand, I shall soon be in my grave Such is the fate of great men So it was with the Cæsars and Alexander And I, too, am forgotten, and the Marengo conqueror and Emperor is a college theme. My exploits are to keep vocabularies busy about my tutor, who puts in judgment over me, according to me censure or praise And remarks what soon is to become of me I die before my time, and my dead body, too, must turn to the earth and become food for worms Behold the destiny now at hand of him who has been called the great Napoleon What an abyss between my great misery and the eternal reign of Christ, who is proclaimed, loved and adored, and whose kingdom is extending over all the earth!"

THE NEW TERRITORY OF WYOMING.—This new Territory or proposed Territory—it has not yet been organized by act of Congress—is described as bounded on the west by the Rocky Mountains, east by Nebraska and south by Colorado The resources of the Wyoming are, as yet, undeveloped, but enough is known of its immense deposits of gold, silver, copper and coal, to warrant us in saying that within a year from now it will equal Montana in population. The veins of coal alone will supply the Pacific Railroad for ages to come These veins are already being worked in Colorado At Boulder City, north of Denver, there are five veins of a superior quality of coal, the largest being fifteen feet and the smallest five feet thick At the crossing of the North Platte there is a coal strata among the rocks on the north side of the river The other precious metals will be found equally rich This Territory is bound to be settled up with a thriving population The new mines on Strawberry, now in Utah, are in this proposed new Territory

HOW TO KEEP A KEROSENE LAMP CLEAN.—Most people who use kerosene lamps have found great difficulty in keeping them clean The oil seems to creep up by the wick and otherwise, and thus out and over the outside of the lamp The Scientific American suggests as a remedy, to smear the edges of the lamp where the oil comes over, with the white of an egg, gum arabic or any other convenient substance which is repulsive to the oil

A literary paper in Paris having proposed for discussion the question, "What is a woman?" a correspondent sent to the editor the following answer "A woman is a small article of luxurious furniture, who ought not to make the journey of life without a label inscribed 'very fragile'"

The California corporators are again at work upon the Oregon Railroad, or rather blocking out work to be done hereafter. A survey of the line has been ordered from Marysville to Shasta, which has already been pushed from the former place to a point opposite Red Bluff, a distance of eighty miles. This survey shows that between the points mentioned there are no obstacles of importance, and the Bulletin asserts that the construction of the road as far as Red Bluff will be easier than that of any other line of the same length in the whole State. The route proceeds by nearly a straight line the whole way. The estimates for this portion of the route show that the road can be built at an astonishingly small expense. Competent engineers who have had experience in railroad building in California estimate that this section of eighty miles can be built for $950,000, or at an average cost of less than $12,000 per mile. In these calculations everything is included except the rolling stock necessary to operate the road. We do not understand, however, that the Company have so far completed their arrangements that work will actually begin at once, though they have been engaged in reconciling conflicting interests and endeavoring to secure co-operation. The land grant amounts to 12,800 — per mile. How much actual assistance this grant will afford is a point which cannot yet be settled. The Company is understood to be relying in a good deal upon it; but the probability is that the aid it will afford will not contribute much to the building of the road. But the construction of that section of the road will be a paying project in any event, as the country through which it passes will furnish business enough for its support.

We observe that our California friends are considerably interested in this enterprise, and that a few of their papers speak hopefully of the survey as another step towards uniting the Columbia river with the Golden Gate. In this calculation much stress is laid upon the reported fact that the Oregon Company has contracted for the construction of 140 miles of the road from Portland southward. We should only be too glad to say that the immediate construction of the road for this distance was a fact to be relied on; but we have heard of no one here who hopes for any great results from anything that has yet been done. A contract was made some months ago, but as we understand it it was quite informal; and so far as we are aware nothing has been heard of the parties since. We believe we are safe in saying that nothing has been definitely settled, though the negotiation only had may be renewed and lead to actual results. But at present the matter does not appear to be in such a shape as to hold out any great promises. This 160 miles of rail — however — at what Oregon wants, and — few miles as which have been presented of the most of a considerable section of the California — ay set whether a line through this valley — to be two objections could not be — at a less cost than many have hitherto sup-

Let Democracy be vindicated and let the truth of science be maintained.

STANTON. The recent dispatch which stated that the Secretary of War voted "nay" on the — points involved in the Attorney General's opinion of the reconstruction act, did not give a correct idea of his votes. The merely technical and unimportant points he concurred in; but every object made a feature he resolutely opposed. It seems strange that Stanton is allowed to remain in the Cabinet. It is generally known that he is presented from resigning by the solicitations of those who feel the importance of having one staunch man in the Cabinet. The fact that the President does not dismiss him, gives color to the assertion which has often been made, that he dares not turn him away. Though Mr. Stanton has faults, his virtues and services counterbalance them and the country to-day owes more to his — vigilance and incorruptible patriotism, than to any living civilian.

— me of acting President Johnson's operations to defeat the will of Congress and of the people of the North, may be understood from a statement made by one of the so-called members from the South, who undertook to obtain a seat in the last Congress. This member told Henry S. Foote that "when the first military reconstruction bill was pending in Congress, President Johnson formally advised him and other members from the South to return to their respective homes and aid in causing the Constitutional Amendment to be rejected, promising that in the event of their success in attaining this object, he would veto the military bill, and if even it should be passed over his head, he would refuse to execute it." This is what he has done, whether he made the promise to the Southern members or not.

FLOWING IN.—The La Crosse, (Wis.,) Republican says:

"There has never been such a rush of immigrants to this section of the country from Europe as now. There are hundreds or Norwegian immigrants arriving every day in the Milwaukie and St. Paul Railroad, and there are tens of thousands more on their way! It is not necessary for us to say that the class of immigrants now coming are of the very best that settle in this country, that they will compose, in a few years, the 'bone and sinew' of the country. They make industrious, frugal, law abiding citizens. The more we have of them the better for the country. They open up the country and make the roads all bring forth in its turn."

Cheap fare and quick transit would bring many — to Oregon. Here they are needed, — and here they will —

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO AUGUST 5.

Railroad Accident—Strike Among Coal Miners.

CHICAGO, Aug 4.—Two sleeping car trains on the Chicago and Cincinnati railroad were thrown from the track by a broken rail yesterday. One passenger was killed and several others wounded—some fatally.

A thousand coal miners are on a strike at La Salle, Illinois. They refuse to permit other laborers to go to work. Serious apprehensions are entertained, and the proprietors request the Governor to call out the military, which he has not yet done.

Cholera in Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Aug 4.—The Board of Health adjourned in a body yesterday in consequence of the Aldermen declining to conform to their actions. Forty deaths by cholera occurred during the week.

Bold Robbery.

ST LOUIS, Aug 3.—Three men stopped a stage near Marysville, yesterday, and robbed the United States express of about $1,700. The passengers were also robbed of money and valuables.

Conflict of Authority in North Carolina.

WASHINGTON, Aug 3.—There is a grave conflict of authority between the military and Federal officers in North Carolina. Process in the United States Court lately held there was obstructed by Col. Frank, commanding the post at Wilmington, owing to Sickles' order having forbidden Judges to entertain suits for matters occurring between December 20th, 1860, and May, 1865, which Col Frank interprets to apply to the Federal United States Courts. Marshal Goodloe has suspended action until he can receive instructions from Washington, or until he learns whether Gen. Sickles approves the course of Col Frank. It is confidently believed that Sickles will approve the action of the post commander.

Santa Anna's Case.

WASHINGTON, Aug 4.—Official correspondence relative to the arrest of Santa Anna furnished no material facts not already telegraphed.

Murders by Indians—Washington News.

NEW YORK, Aug 5.—The Times' Fort Harker correspondence says: The Indians killed seven railroad laborers yesterday, six miles from the fort, in daylight while exposed to the fire of fifty infantry troops and a dozen stage employees. This is considered the boldest dash yet made. Captain Ames pursued and overtook the Indians but they were too strong to justify an attack, and he sent back for reinforcements which were forwarded.

The Tribune's special says the old story of the resignation of Stanton is revived this time with some probability. The contemplated removal of Sheridan is opposed by Stanton and Grant. The President stated recently that he would relieve Stanton first and Gen. Sheridan afterwards. Some doubt is expressed as to his power to remove a Cabinet officer under the tenure of office bill, but the President's friends say if he cannot make Stanton resign, he will suspend him until the meeting of Congress. The subject creates much talk.

General Grant considers himself partially responsible for the faithful execution of the reconstruction act, and heartily approves the removal of Sheridan.

The Times' special gives the text of a recommendation to mercy for Mrs. Surratt signed by all the members of the Court except Generals Low Wallace, Howe, Harris and Col. Clendenning.

Mexico and the West Indies.

NEW YORK, Aug 5.—The Herald's Havana special says, referring to the loss of the Caudad Condal, that the passengers and crew were saved.

News from Sisal, July 28th, and Vera Cruz to the 24th, is received.

Santa Anna is still in prison. Marquez has not been found. The foreign Ministers are unsatisfied. The press is advocating a general amnesty, but all agree that severe punishment should fall on Marquez, Lozado and others.

Advices from St Domingo say the popularity of President Cabral is diminishing, owing to his opposition to a representation of the people, supporting the Ministry. Several members have resigned and Congress is dissolved.

Advices from Jamaica report a continued prostration of trade at Kingston. There is a general immunity from frauds and robberies committed in official circles. The Colonial Government under the new system is unsuccessful, and loud complaints are made at the heavy taxation imposed by the Colonial authorities.

The Herald's Key West special says the paying out of the cable began August 4th. The line will be opened about the 15th of August.

European News by Steamer.

NEW YORK, Aug 4.—The City of Baltimore, from Queenstown the 25th, has arrived.

Rattazzi says the armaments and enlistments said to be in preparation for the invasion of the Papal States are being made by the Romans themselves. He added that the Italian Government will secure the integrity of the Pontifical dominions.

The Roman National Committee has issued a circular, calling on the revolutionists to reserve their energies for the overthrow of the remnant of the Papal Government, and the annexation of Rome to Italy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The Cimbria, from Hamburg via Southampton the 24th, has arrived.

The Kings of Bavaria and Portugal had arrived at Paris. The statement that the King of Denmark would visit Paris is unfounded.

George Dixon, liberal, is elected to Parliament from Birmingham, to succeed Fairfield as Bright's colleague.

The Empress Eugenia visited Portsmouth.

The Portugal Minister for Foreign Affairs has arrived at London, to endeavor to preserve a loan.

The Greek squadron is organizing at Athens. It is composed of six vessels of 30 guns each.

The blockade runner Arcadia has completed her nineteenth voyage to Crete, and took aboard two women and children for Greece. Mehemet Pasha has been surrounded by the insurgents in Crete. The women and children have taken refuge in the mountains, where there is no danger of being killed by the Turks. The foreign consuls have protested against unnecessary violence. The English consul has sent a steamer to protect them.

A Bucharest telegram says several measures to prevent a meeting of Moldavian Deputies has been taken. It is believed the object of the meeting is to promote the separation of Roumenian principalities.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The steamship America from Bremen the 20th, has arrived. Her news is mostly anticipated.

A telegram from Valencia on the 20th says that the Atlantic cable of 1858 again broke suddenly that afternoon. It is supposed that the break is about fifty miles from Heart's Content. The Chairman of the telegraph company says that as the break occurred in a moderate depth, the injury can be repaired with great facility. The other cable is in perfect order.

The Pope has sent some valuable presents to the Sultan and Viceroy of Egypt, for protection offered the Catholics in their dominion.

Six hundred Garibaldians had appeared on the Papal frontier, but were immediately driven off by the Italian troops.

Twenty-five deaths from cholera occurred in Rome on the 17th of July.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

PARIS, Aug 3.—Moustier, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, will accompany Napoleon on his visit to the Emperor of Austria, and remain three days at Vienna.

A London dispatch from Athens says the Greek Government has announced the determination of declaring war against Turkey on the first of September, should hostilities against the Christians of Candia not be ameliorated. Military preparations are making for such a contingency.

The Dunderberg has arrived at Cherbourg after a passage of fourteen days and seven hours. The ship behaved nobly, and proved a perfect sea boat.

The visit of the Emperor to Vienna has been postponed one week.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—It is stated that the Danish reply to the Prussian dispatch on the subject of guarantees for the protection of the German residents of North Schleswig, opens the way to a direct understanding between the two governments. The attitude of Denmark is by no means unfriendly to peace overtures.

The Emir of Bokhara has agreed to an armistice until July 11. Hostilities will recommence except in case of extreme necessity.

A claim has been presented against the estate of Peter Betts and Crampton, in behalf of the Chatham & Dover Railroad, for £6,801,000.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The Prussian journals state that Russian emissaries are distributing money among the people of Transylvania.

The deficit in the Italian Budget is 217,000,000 of livres.

A bill preventing public meetings in the Royal parks, has passed to a second reading in the House of Commons. Mill and Taylor opposed it on the grounds that it limited the liberty of speech.

Empress Eugenia made a private visit to Queen Victoria on the 23d.

PARIS, Aug 3.—It is said that arrangements are being made for an interview between Napoleon and the King of Prussia, to take place after the visit of the former to Vienna. The place of meeting is not yet designated. The Emperor has received an address from the foreign members of the Imperial Commission of the exposition in reply to which he says he hopes that peace and happiness to the world will spring from such an exhibition.

PARIS, Aug 3.—The election of Kossuth to the Hungarian Diet causes alarm to the Conservative party, who fear that Kossuth's extreme views and his powerful prestige may lead to disturbances in the existing political agreement with the Emperor of Austria.

FLORENCE, Aug 3.—W. K. Roberts, President of the Roman brotherhood, is now at Naples intriguing with the Radical Democrats, urging party action in Southern Italy.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Consul Bacha, of Memphis under date of July 16th, that nearly the entire district of Sphakia is subjugated and the insurgents can hold out but a short time longer.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 5.—A meeting of the State Central Committee was held to-day at their rooms, corner of Montgomery and Pine streets, for the purpose of filling the vacancy on the State ticket, occasioned by the death of Richard H. Farquhar, nominee for Clerk of the supreme Court.

E. G. Waite, of Nevada, was unanimously chosen as the nominee in the place of R. H. Farquhar.

Action has been commenced in the 15th District Court, by Reville Wells vs Milton S. Latham, et al, for alleged unlawful entry into and conversion to defendant's use of plaintiff's mill, on Fremont street. Damages claimed, $150,000.

On Saturday afternoon a boy, while hunting in the bushes near the Presidio, found the body of a man. A pistol was in one hand and a bullet in his head, but the body was much decomposed. Yesterday the body was recognized to be that of Wolgnan Solaces, a native of Holland.

The steamship Moses Taylor sailed for San Juan del Sur to-day.

Last evening about six o'clock a soldier was shot at the Presidio House, by a citizen named Frederick P Weisenborn. The soldiers name is Rich. At two P M to-day the physician stated that the man may recover, though the probabilities are strong against him.

From Saturday night at 10 o'clock, to the same hour last night, 31 sailing vessels of different classes came into the harbor. Marine reporters say it exceeds any previous list of arrivals within a like period of time since San Francisco was constituted an American port of entry.

The steamer Contra Costa on her return trip yesterday evening, while near Point Isabel, saw a schooner jib suddenly as if her helm had been left without a steersman and immediately something like a man's head was seen in the water near her. The captain of the steamer made for the schooner and found her to be the Orpheus, and to be deserted. The object in the water proved to be the only man belonging to her, who had either fallen over board or accidently struck by the boom. He was picked up and taken on board the steamer, but died of exhaustion before he reached the town.

The packet mail steamship Great Republic arrived here this morning in a passage of 75 days from New York via Panama. This vessel is now, one of the finest in her class. She will sail for Yokohama and Hong Kong on the 31st of September. Her consort, the Comet, sailed from New York for this port on July 20th.

SANTA CLARA, Aug. 5.—At 12 30 this morning a fire broke out in Henry Grendlinck's shoe store, and spread rapidly, consuming all the buildings and contents, from Cameron's brick hotel east to Liberty street, and south to Chandler's brick dwelling house. The loss is estimated at from $7,000 to $12,000.

VIRGINIA CITY, Aug 5.—The miners of the Savage and Chollar Potosi mines have struck for $4 per day. The superintendents of both mines have agreed to pay four dollars a day to most of them, and discharged the rest. There is no danger of any trouble.

RESOLUTIONS AND EULOGY.—At a regular meeting on the 5th instant, of Hassalo Lodge, No 15, I O O F, the following resolutions were adopted and the appended eulogy upon the late Rt Rev Bishop Scott, was pronounced by Br A G Bradford

WHEREAS, By the sudden dispensation of Divine Providence, Rt Rev Thos. F Scott, late Bishop of the Diocese of Oregon, has been called from earth to that better land, from the family below to that above, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Rev Bishop Scott, our order has lost a most highly gifted and able defender, a member than whom there is none more worthy, a man of superior native ability, of finished scholastic attainments, of pure untainted moral worth strong in power infallible in purpose, genial and kind in disposition, he was not only an ornament to, but a bright particular star in the fraternal family of our Order We miss his presence, we feel the loss of his power for good. He was our true friend, our esteemed brother We mourn his unexpected departure while his memory shall remain green among us—and shall grow brighter and yet brighter still as the influence exerted in our order by his many noble utterances, and kindly sentiments and words of love shall flow on down the stream of our fraternal existence to instruct, animate, invigorate our brotherhood

Resolved, That in the death of our late Bishop Scott we recognize the existence of that fact so important to all; that we, individually and collectively, are moving irresistibly, but surely, forward toward that dark river of Fate, and beyond which we must all enter upon the strange fields of that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns"

Resolved, That we as a body, tender our sincere condolence to the widow of the deceased in this severe affliction

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the Daily OREGONIAN, Daily Herald and the weekly Pacific Christian Advocate; also to the New Age of San Francisco; and the Secretary is instructed to prepare and forward a copy, under seal of this lodge, to the widow of deceased. W. W STAPLEING, R S.

EULOGY BY PAST GRAND A G. BRADFORD.

It is with no ordinary feeling that I arise to announce that another one of our brethern has passed the boundary which separates "time from eternity" Brother Rt Rev. Thomas F. Scott, Bishop of the Diocese of Oregon, has been summoned from the busy scenes of life to the countless armies of the dead. The character of the deceased was so pure that it will not admit of eulogy. As a Christian, those who know him accounted him a faithful servant to his Master; a truthful instructor to his people It was my fortune to be a personal friend of the deceased, and many hours in his company have been of immense satisfaction, and however his kind and affectionate words of admonition and counsel may have been disregarded, I never can forget his earnestness for the right These of you who listened to him on the night of our anniversary, of the introduction of our Order in America, the 26th of April last, cannot fail to remember the words which came with such earnestness from his soul for us, not to look to our Order for the fullness of hope, but for us to look to a higher—a spiritual building not made with hands, in which were the worshippers of faith. His pure, godly, Christian character won for him the love and respect of everyone. He has gone to join the perfect body on high He is now in the presence of the Grand Sire of the Universe.

EXPLOSION OF A KEROSENE LAMP.—Last Saturday evening about 9 o'clock a kerosene lamp exploded at the house of Mr. J. C. Van Rensselaer at No. 237 Second st. Mrs. Van Rensselaer had been sitting at a sewing machine upon which stood the lamp and had just risen when the lamp exploded, scattering a thousand fragments and burning oil in every direction. Mr Van Rensselaer was out of town and Mrs. Van Rensselaer was alone except a few of the burning fluid flew upon her dress, and in a few seconds she was in flames. With considerable presence of mind she extinguished her burning dress and running out of the house gave the alarm. Mr Fred. Bohlman, who was near, in the street instantly rushed in and with blankets and carpets extinguished the flames which were already making rapid headway The damage to carpet, curtains and furniture was about $300 The lamp had been standing under the sewing machine for some time, and was lighted just about as usual when Mrs Van Rensselaer was alone The oil used was of the best quality—clear and free from sediment. The lamp, an ordinary glass one, was shattered into a thousand fragments and scattered all over the room. The explosion was a report and a rushing sound like that of a rocket, combined. The combustion of the liberated oil was instantaneous and fierce It was but a miracle that Mrs Van Rensselaer being so near the lamp as she was, did not receive greater injury. But for the accidental presence in the street of Mr Bohlman and his cool presence of mind in the emergency, the entire block would have been destroyed, as nearly all the immediate neighbors were absent, attending the opera.

PASSENGERS FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Orizaba, Conner, commander, sailed for San Francisco, at 7 o'clock P M yesterday, with the following list of passengers: Mrs J Wiubery, Mrs H O'Connor, Miss Lucy Heywood Mrs Chase, Allen Hay, H. Smith, W. M. White, R Corpe, Jas Colin, Wm Murray, T. McF. Patton L H Wakefield, D. McCully, R. Gowenlock and wife C B Stevens, E L James, Wm Malone, John Losey, J R Rowland and wife, R Williams, Frank B Hay, Chas. Hedderson, A I Bloch, Miss St. Orge, M Denny G D Benedict and wife, S D. Bordge, G. W. [illegible] D Northrup, D. F. Harrington, R M Dorsey and wife H Rice, B F Dorsey, W. Elliott, Mrs J P Knapp in J P Whitney, Lloyd Brooke, Mrs. [illegible] wife and three children, Mrs. Gindon and three [illegible] Swinehart, H. A. Cobb, Jr., H Fitzgerald, W Butler and Y C Brooks, Byron Z Holmes, E F. [illegible] Hannah, Mrs. R. B Sanford, L. Lowenthal and wife Frank and George Conklin E. Picard, wife and child from C Picard, wife and servant, W. G West (Wells Fargo & Co's Messengers) and 38 in steerage.

RETURN ON A VISIT.—Mr. Lloyd Brooke, one of the old-time residents in Portland, went passenger by the steamer last evening, returning to visit his old home in Maryland. Mr. Brooke left home in November, 1848, before the news of the discovery of gold in California had been fully confirmed. The passage to the Isthmus was made on the steamer California, which was the first steamer sent by the Horn to ply between the Isthmus and the New York City. In May, 1849, Mr Brooke came to Oregon where he has resided ever since, never having been back to the States on a visit or business He has not even been to San Francisco since 1853 There is probably not another man in the old city of a promiscuous business man who has not been to San Francisco within the last fourteen years.

NIGHT OF THE OPERA.—The Opera of Norma was performed last evening by the Bianchi troupe at Oro Fino Hall. Signorina Bellini, in the character of NORMA is said to greatly better advantage than in Il Trovatore. Her singing last evening was effective, artistic and replete with true to the sentiment of the drama. Her softly trilling notes in the closing scene were very beautiful and quite equal to the performances of any of the best Italian Donnas There are very few singers who can sustain the whole range of notes which the managers last evening, with perfect clearness, and apparently with ease. We think the audience would have been unreasonable had they expressed less delight (the applause was liberal) at the performances of the entire troupe

STRANGE WHAT DIFFERENCE THERE SHOULD BE.—The couplet beginning with this line applies excellently well to the various accounts of the meteor, seen last week The Mountaineer says it was as large as a "flour barrel" The Record cites the opinions of others, that it was "half as large as the moon;" "large as a star," "large as fifty stars." Some said it appeared to be about half a mile distant, while others thought it might have been seventy-five miles. We have often remarked with people's ideas of the apparent size of the moon at full One will say it appears to him to be about eighteen feet in diameter; another will say, eighteen inches, so variously do people look at the same thing.

I. O. G. T. INSTALLATION.—Saturday evening, August 3d, A. J. Borland, Lodge Deputy, installed the following officers for Milwaukie Lodge, No 57, I. O. G. T., to serve the term ending November 1st: John Hacker, W C T; Miss Laura Miller, W. V. T. — Ross, W S; Mrs. Margaret Moore, W A S; W. S. Falling, W F S, Mrs J B. Merrick, W. T, Wm. Brown, W. M, Miss Irene Torrence, W. D M; Edgar Torrence, W. O G; Miss Augusta Miller, W. C; Mrs M. A Grey, W. H F S; Miss Phoebe Hathaway, W. L. H. S.; A J. Borland, W. C., J. H. Lambert, P. W. C. T.

THE "LITTLE CORPORAL" STORY.—Many readers remember the "Little Corporal" story about the great Napoleon. Juan Columbe, the sentinel who stopped the disguised Emperor on that occasion with the remark, "Even if you were the Little Corporal himself you could not pass," has just died at Gonaix, Soine et Marne, at the age of 83. He was pensioned by the present Napoleon some years ago.

A man named John Phillips was recently stabbed and killed at Fiddletown, Amador county, Cal., by a man named Gist. A letter containing this information also states that a brother of the deceased resides in this part of Oregon.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—From the Medical Director of the General Hospital, Benton Barracks, near St Louis, March 6, 1862.

"Messrs. John I Brown & Son, Boston, Mass.—Use of your far-famed and most serviceable 'Troches' is being made in the hospital of which I have charge, and with very beneficial and decided results in allaying bronchial irritation" For Coughs and Colds the Troches give prompt relief.

"THE VERY THINGS TO HAVE ABOUT THE HOUSE," is what everybody says of Howe & Stevens' famous Fluxuity Dye Colors. What everybody says with so much unanimity and enthusiasm must be true They are reliable, useful and economical. Sold by Smith & Davis.

PERFECTLY EXCRUCIATING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which come from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like these? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments.

SOOTHING AND BRACING.—There is no preparation of a nervous character which has such a soothing effect in cases of nervous excitement as

DR. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

Although the fame of this renowned invigorant rests mainly on its astonishing cures of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and intestinal disorders, it is equally efficacious in nervous complaints. Thousands of ladies resort to it as a remedy for hysteria, fluttering of the heart, nervous headache, vertigo, general debility and all peculiar disturbances and derangements to which, as a sex, they are subject. It clears and lightens the depressed mental powers as well as strengthens the body, and its use is never followed by any unpleasant reaction. Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere

RESOLUTIONS AND EULOGY.—At a regular meeting on the 3d instant, of Hassalo Lodge, No 15, I. O. O. F., the following resolutions were adopted and the appended eulogy upon the late Rt. Rev Bishop Scott, was pronounced by Mr A G Bradford

WHEREAS, By the sudden dispensation of Divine Providence, Rt. Rev. Thos F Scott, late Bishop of the Diocese of Oregon, has been called from earth to that better land, from the family below to that above; therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Bishop Scott, our order has lost a most highly gifted and able defender; a member than whom there is none more worthy; a man of superior native ability, of finished scholastic attainments, of pure unlimited moral worth, strong in power, inflexible in purpose, genial and kind in disposition, he was not only an ornament to, but a bright particular star in the fraternal family of our Order We miss his presence, we feel the loss of his power for good. He was our true friend our esteemed brother We mourn his unexpected departure, while his memory shall remain green among us—and shall grow brighter and yet brighter still as the influence entered to our order by his many noble attributes, and kindly sentiments and words of love shall flow on down the stream of our fraternal existence to instruct, animate, invigorate our brotherhood.

Resolved, That in the death of our Bro. Bishop Scott we recognize the existence of that fact so important to all; that we, individually and collectively, are moving irresistibly, but surely, forward toward that dark river of death, and beyond which we must all enter upon the strange fields of that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns."

Resolved, That we as a body, tender our sincere condolence to the widow of the deceased in this sorore at affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the DAILY OREGONIAN, Daily Herald and the weekly Pacific Christian Advocate; also to the New Age of San Francisco; and the Secretary is instructed to prepare the same and forward a copy, under seal of this lodge, to the widow of deceased. (Signed) J H. MITCHEL, Chirman

W. W. SPAULDING, R. S.

EULOGY BY PAST GRAND A. G. BRADFORD,

It is with no ordinary feeling that I arise to announce that another one of our brothers has passed the boundary which separates "time from eternity." Brother Rt. Rev Thomas F. Scott, Bishop of the Diocese of Oregon, has been summoned from the busy scenes of life to the countless aeries of the dead The character of the deceased was so pure that it will not admit of eulogy. As a Christian, those who knew him accounted him a faithful servant to his Master; a truthful instructor to his people It was my fortune to be a personal friend of the deceased, and many hours in his company have been of immense satisfaction, and however his kind and affectionate word of admonition and counsel may have been disregarded, I never can forget his earnestness for the truth Those of you who listened to him on the night of our anniversary of the introduction of our Order in America, the 26th of April last, cannot fail to remember the words which came with such earnestness from his soul for us, not to look to our Order for the fullness of hope, but for us to look to a higher and spiritual building not made with hands, in which were the worshippers of faith. His pure, gentle, Christian character won for him the love and respect of everyone. He has gone to join the perfect body on high He is now in the presence of the Grand Sire of the Universe.

EXPLOSION OF A KEROSENE LAMP.—Last Saturday evening about 9 o'clock a kerosene lamp exploded at the house of Mr. J. C. Van Rensselaer at No. 257 Second street. Mrs. Van Rensselaer had been sitting at a sewing machine upon which stood the lamp and had just risen when the lamp exploded, scattering a thousand fragments and bursting all in every direction. Mr Van Rensselaer was out of town and Mrs. Van Rensselaer was alone. Some portion of the burning fluid flew upon her dress, setting it on fire. With considerable presence of mind she extinguished her burning dress and running out of the house gave an alarm. Mr. Fred. Bohlman, who was near, in the street, instantly rushed in and with blankets and water extinguished the flames which were already making rapid headway. The damage to carpet, curtains and furniture was about $200. The lamp had been standing undisturbed on the sewing machine for some time, and was burning just about as usual when Mrs. Van Rensselaer rose. The oil used was of the best quality—clear and white The lamp, an ordinary glass one, was shattered into fine splinters and fragments and scattered all over the carpet. The explosion was a report and a rushing sound like that of a rocket, combined. The combustion of the liberated oil was instantaneous and fierce. It was almost a miracle that Mrs. Van Rensselaer being so near the lamp as she was, did not receive greater injury. But for the accidental presence in the street of Mr. Bohlman and his cool presence of mind in the emergency, the house with others near it, must have been destroyed, as nearly all the immediate neighbors were absent, attending the opera.

PASSENGERS FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Orizaba, O'Connor, commander, sailed for San Francisco, at 7 o'clock P. M., yesterday, with the following list of passengers: Mrs. J. Wineberg, Mrs. M. O'Connor, Mrs. Lucy Reynard, Mrs. Chase, Allen Hay, H. Smith, W. M. White, S. Carpe, Jas. Orin, Wm Murray, T. McK. Patton, L. H. Wakefield, D McCully, R. Gowenlockland wife, C. S. Stevens, E. L. Jaques, Wm. Mudge, John Leary, J. R. Rowland and wife, B. Williams, Frank B May, Charles Goldsheim, A. I Bloch, Rev. L. St. Onge, M. Denny, G. D. Danskin and wife, S. B. Burdge, O. W. Chapman, O. F. Northrup, D. F. Harrington, R. M. Dorsey and wife, H. Noe, S. F Dorsey, W. Elliott, Mrs J. B. Knapp, Dr. J. F. Whitney, Lloyd Brooke, Mr. Morgan, wife and three children, Mrs. Condon and three children, S. Danenbaum, H. A. Cobb, Jr., M. Fitzgerald, W. Kirtley, Capt. N. C. Brooks, Byron Z. Holmes, E. F. Muller, Mrs. Hannah, Mrs. E. R. Sanford, L. Lowenthal and wife, Frank and George Dorilair, E. Pinard, wife and six children, L. Pinard, wife and servant, W. G. West (Wells, Fargo & Co's Messenger) and 28 in steerage.

GONE ON A VISIT.—Mr. Lloyd Brooke, one of the oldest settlers in Portland, went passenger by the steamer last evening, designing to visit his old home in Maryland. Mr. Brooke left home in November, 1848, before the news of the discovery of gold in California had been fully confirmed. The passage to the Islamus was made on the steamer Falcon, landing at Chagres. Crossing to the Pacific side of the Isthmus, the passengers waited for the new ship California which was the first steamer sent around the Horn to ply between the Isthmus and the New Edorado. In May, Mr. Brooke came to Oregon where he has resided ever since, never having been back to the States on a visit or business. He has not even been to San Francisco since 1853 There is probably not another instance in the city of a prominent business man who has not been to San Francisco within the last fourteen years.

SECOND NIGHT OF THE OPERA.—The Opera of Norma was presented last evening by the Bianchi troupe at Oro Fino Hall. Signorina Bellini, in the character of NORMA appeared to greatly better advantage than in Il Trovatore. Her singing last evening was effective, artistic and remarkably true to the sentiment of the drama. Her acting was fine in the closing scene and were very beautiful and quite equal to the performances of any of the late Prima Donnas. There are very few singers who can attain the wide range of notes which she mangued last evening, with a perfectly clear tone, and apparently with ease. We think the audience would have been unreasonable had they expressed less delight (the applause was liberal) at the performances of the entire troupe.

STRANGE WHAT DIFFERENCES THERE SHOULD BE.—The couplet beginning with this line applies excellently well to the various accounts of the meteor, seen last week. The Mountaineer says it was as large as a "flour barrel" The Record cites the opinions of others, that it was "half as large as the moon" "large as a star;" "large as fifty stars." Some said it appeared to be about half a mile distant, while others thought it might have been seventy-five miles. We have been often much amused with people's ideas of the apparent size of the moon at full One will say it appears to him to be about eighteen feet in diameter; another will say, eighteen inches; so variously do people look at the same thing.

I. O. O. F. INSTALLATION.—Saturday evening, August 3d, A. J. Borland, Lodge Deputy, installed the following officers for Milwaukie Lodge, No 57, I. O. G. T., to serve the term ending November 1st: John Packer, W C T; Miss Laura Miller, W. V. T.; — Ross, W S; Mrs. Margaret Moore, W. A. S.; W. S. Fuller, W F S; Mrs J. B. Merrick, W. T; Wm. Brown, W. M; Miss Irene Torrence, W. D. M.; Edgar Torrence, W. O. G.; Miss Augusta Miller, W. L. G.; Mrs. M. A. Grey, W. R. S.; Miss Phebe Hathaway, W. L. H. S.; A. J. Borcland, W. C.; J. R. Lambert, P. W. THE "LITTLE CORPORAL" STORY.—Many readers remember the "Little Corporal" story about the great Napoleon. Jean Colubbe, the sentinel who stopped the disguised Emperor on that occasion with the remark, "Even if you were the Little Corporal himself you could not pass," has just died at Gonaix, Seine et Marne, at the age of 88. He was pensioned by the present Napoleon some years ago.

A man named John Phillips was recently stabbed and killed at Fiddletown, Amador county, Cal., by a man named Gist. A letter containing this information also states that a brother of the deceased resides in this part of Oregon.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—From the Medical Director of the General Hospital, Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, March 8, 1862.

"Messrs. John I. Brown & Son, Boston, Mass.—Use of your far-famed and most serviceable 'Troches' is being made in the hospital of which I have charge, and with very beneficial and decided results in allaying bronchial irritation." For Coughs and Colds the Troches give prompt relief.

"THE VERY THINGS TO HAVE ABOUT THE HOUSE," is what everybody says of Howe & Stevens' famous Fumsly Dye Colors. What everybody says with as much unanimity and enthusiasm must be true They are reliable, useful and economical. Sold by Smith & Davis.

PERFECTLY EXHILARATING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which came from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like those? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world-wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments.

DRAKE'S PLANTATION B

The Best Man Wins Her.

[From the London Once a Week.]

I.

Hid away in the loveliest part of Perthshire, nestling among the often sung Braes of Balquhidder, lies Loch Voil, upon the shores of which Rob Roy lived and died, and where in the quiet lonely kirkwood rests "Clan Alpin's vassan and her and." There are M'Gregors still in the clachan of Balquhidder. M'Gregors who speak with glistening eye and heightened color of the chief, and amongst whom no tales are so popular as those which treat of the days when the clan with the "name nameless by day" was at once the terror and protection of the country. Every child knows the story of the feuds between the M'Larens and the M'Gregors, and how the Stewarts of Appin, coming to help their kinsmen, were met by the clansmen at the clachan, where Rob Roy challenged any one of Appin to single combat, eager, by such personal hazard, to avert the horrors of battle. They will tell you, too, how the great Duke of Athol exhausted his time and patience trying to catch Rob Roy; and the story of the funeral, when Lady Glenfalloch, thinking her brother was slain sprang upon the Duke, and, dragged him from his horse, gave him such a taste of the tenderness of the M'Gregors that he took timely warning and retired, leaving Rob to bury his mother in peace and quiet.

Some ten years ago a descendant of Rob Roy's, Helen M'Gregor, was the beauty of Balquhidder. Helen was a fair, blue eyed, golden lassie, with whom life had been one long laugh, and to whom the world seemed to bear neither frowns nor clouds. Her father, Tam M'Gregor, was a farmer and well-to-do for his station, his sons helped him on the hills, and Helen was a tidy hand in the house, quite able to take many cares from her mother's shoulders.

Their cottage stood away from the clachan, near the foot of Meal-mach. A lovely little standing it was too, with high gray rocks on one side, on the other an oak and birch-wood, among the branches of which the soft summer breezes, when they had kissed the lake into a ripple of delight, would sigh and whisper their pleasant songs of brighter and warmer lands.

Tam's cottage had served the wants of many a generation of M'Gregors, here a little and there a little being added, as the owner's family increased or his fortunes prospered. The thatch was matted together by a flourishing growth of various plants, wild flowers and houseleek predominating. Roses and honey-suckle flourished in the narrow border, and clustering around the windows, not gay and thriving geraniums, yellow offerings from the gardener of Glen-buckla, who was one of Helen's many admirers. Helen being fancy-free herself, was wont to make a joke about love; and not caring for either fairs or gatherings, escaped much of the gossip which attached to older girls. Yet, quietly as the little maiden lived, she could no more avoid lovers than can the violet hide away its treasures from the bee, "Love will venture in where he dares weel be seen," and accordingly Helen's lovers were neither few nor slack in making their way to the farm; while much to the girl's discomfort, her mother took pride to herself in counting the steward, well-to-do lads who would take a place by the ingle nook, and while talking to the farmer of sheep, wool and markets, would hope to catch a stray glance, kinder than usual, from Helen, who, however, went on with her spinning as if no eyes were seeking hers, and there were no such things as love or wooing. And many a lad doubtless thought with Hobbie Elliott, that "whiring a bit stick wi' a thread reaming to it" was but poor and tiresome work.

It was common oftener than the rest, so often that it was whispered about that Helen and Duncan were courting, nor did Duncan attempt to deny what he wished in his inmost soul was true. He had wooed Helen long, and had only waited for a farm to enter the list openly. Now he had a farm and a decent house to take his wife to, he thought the right time had come; and soon, seeing he had shown no will of both father and mother, he was content to wait patiently until some happy day when Helen's heart would waken up and his love meet its reward. And if Duncan was patient it was because only having doubted his success, he experienced a sort of gratification in beating down his passion, or anticipating from a distance the time when Helen would spin by his own hearth and put him such toothsid for what she had made him suffer.

The honest lad in Balquhidder called Helen a lucky lassie, and was right. The courting with general interest had its share of envy, for Duncan was one of the handsomest of the young men, more than six feet, and what perhaps most were further among the girls, Duncan was the champion wrestler, runner, and hammer thrower, and was sure of prizes from the Braemar gathering. Duncan's courting had MEA no further cross than the usual flirting of lads when the gathering of 185 came. All the world went to Braemar that year, much to his own surprise and the indignation of the Balquhidder people, who knew both in wrestling and throwing by a new hand a young man who, by his particular style of dress and manner of speech, was evidently from a different part of the country, if not indeed of a different rank in life to that of the brave young highlanders; and when standing last and angry after the last failure, he was by no means comforted by seeing Helen's cheek redden before the glance of the victor, who, cap in hand, had declared himself to Tam McGregor as the son of his old friend, Neil Lesley, and saying that he had come to the gathering on his way to Balquhidder, the father having told him of the sheepfarming there, and how, for said acquaintance sake, he might be lucky enough to get his lesson in the business of stock. Tam himself, a farmer in but in a small way, was pleased with the compliment, and invited him to his house. Tam's place and his friend had not forgotten him, nor was he proof against the compliment nearly offered to his farming skill. However there is never a lack of hospitality among the clans, and Tam made his young friend welcome to the best his house afforded so long as he liked to stay.

He was a fair haired, blue eyed man, tall and well knit himself, but with the muscles and sinews of a fighter. He had been at the High School in Edinburgh was up in modern topics, and able to hold forth upon subjects which rarely reached the ears of the inhabitants of the Braes, "up" when the shooting season brought down the gentle folk, and the great folk brought their servants, then politics, parliaments, and the last were fami arly discussed in every sheiling. Neil was no idler, either in work, or play, or love. Everything he set his hand to he did in the manner we are told, is sure to succeed. So no wonder, that, falling in love, as he did at once, he found that poor Duncan had watched and waited for in vain; and, waking up the sleeping heart, brought the love light into the sweet hazel eyes, that softened and drooped now as they had never done before any man's gaze. There was no question of love speech between the two, and yet, before the summer came, Helen had found out what a different place love could make the world. There had never been such a heather on the hills, or bracken and wild roses on the braes, as now bloomed; the love filter was acting, and nature took tone, as it always does, from the heart.

"How bonnie you're growing, Nelly," said Tam one day, as Helen came running up the grass her hair escaping from the sky-blue snood, the grey short cotton gown coming half way down the striped linsey petticoat, which was just short enough to show her neatly clad feet and shapely ankles coquettishly arrayed in bright stockings, with elaborately embroidered clocks. "What's come to the lassie, wife? She's breakin' the hearts o' half the lads in the place. There's Duncan, puir lad, fleut a smile he'll gie now, but I'se gang as dour——"

"Wheest, father!" cried Helen, shutting his mouth with a rosy little palm. "Here's Duncan coming."

As she spoke, Duncan stalked up to the door. It was easy to see that something had gone against the grain; the expression of his face, the tone of his voice, his very gait was changed; his clothes were thrown on with a carelessness unlike former days, and his eyes restless and bloodshot, turned uneasily to Helen, as he made some commonplace remark to her father concerning the weather.

Helen's color deepened. Something in the man's eye struck like a knife to her heart, and lay there rankling, making the hot blood spring to her face, and the hand that had been on her father's mouth, clenched fiercely as if to beat back some burst of angrier indignation. But the flush faded the next moment, and a shudder shook her from head to foot, for Niel came in from the hill, and as he turned the corner of the hedge, and Duncan's eyes fell upon him, Helen saw the thick black brows drawn passionately together, the big veins start like knotted cords, and the strong teeth set hard in the nether lip. She saw this, and even then her heart sank with an undefined fear, but it was not until some days afterwards, when the brass were wringing with the mysterious disappearance of Niel Lesly, that the full significance of that look was revealed to her.

II.

Many and various were the reports circulated, until by the expiration of four days, they all settled down into one strong judgment against Niel and a judgment which Helen's outburst of grief and pale stricken face unwittingly strengthened; and it was firmly believed that Niel, having won her love, and grown tired of, her, and to rid himself of her, and his debt of gratitude to her father, had made a midnight flitting. Duncan openly took little part in all that was said, no doubt, that those busy people who are, always in all ranks, looking after their neighbors' affairs can be hold him up as an example of unselfish generosity. There was one, however, to whom his silence had a different signification, and that was Helen, who, from the day the alarm was given, had remembered that afternoon when she saw, as plainly as if written in black and white, the hatred unto death stamped in Duncan's face. She alone, watched as none other could, heard the impatient manner of speech and saw the strange look that had come upon the man's face, and a horrible suspicion and dread filled her mind, harder to bear than all the cruel things raised against Niel's character. There was one small ray of comfort left—a collie dog she had given Niel had disappeared the same day he was missed. He must be alive if Moss was with him, and if he has run away, as the people said, he would scarcely take such a continual sting to his conscience as the faithful dog must be. So, in spite of the dreadful fears that would at times overwhelm her. Helen held fast by hope, hiding her anxiety as best she could by getting away among the hills, and wandering about where she would meet no one to pity or condole with her.

Fifth day had come, it was a busy time, too, for they were gathering the flocks off the hills previous to shooting season, so it came about that Helen fell in with a flock in a lonely pass on the road to Ben Ledi, and eager to escape the shepherds, she scrambled up the banks and hid herself among the whins.

Down the pass came the sheep, filling the air with their voices, stopping now and then to snatch a mouthful of heather. Presently, glancing away to the hill side, Helen caught sight of a dog, bounding down over scaur and bush; but not until it was nearer, and, diverted by the sounds in the glen, had turned aside and taken its stand upon a rock along the foot which the sheep were passing, did she recognize her old colley, the very Moss she had given Neil. Helen's heart leaped to her mouth as she leaned forward to watch the dog, who, falling into his old trade, stood yelping and howling over the flock, waking every echo in the pass, and rousing a perfect storm of bleating.

Helen tried to whistle, but her lips were shrinking and dry. Then she called him by name. The dog came rushing up to her, and was soon whining at her side, licking her hands and face. As soon as she could see anything clearly through the tears that were blinding her, she saw that a blue ribbon was tied round Moss' neck, nearly hidden amongst the thick wool. Helen recognized the ribbon, it had once been hers, and she knew no hand but Neil's could have tied it there, and—But suddenly she ceased thinking. She had unfastened the string, and found a little bit of white calico, and read on it, written in blood, the words, "Help! Reiver's Crag."

Helen cannot tell to this day how she got home; but in little more than half an hour the clachan was deserted, and men and women were all on the way to the Reiver's Crag, a barren rock among the mountains, and from which it was said a Cumberland reiver had been flung in the old days. The miles of moss and moorland were soon crossed, and by evening Neil Lesley was passed from a living death, and safe, not sound, at Tam McGregor's. Sound, poor lad, they whispered he never would be again.

"He had slipped over the Crag, and in going down had caught at a whin-bush, which checked the impetus of his decent, and instead of going to the bottom of the cleft, he had fallen on a ledge. Here Moss had followed, but it was the fourth day before he could get the faithful dog to leave him and bear home tidings that might save him."

Such was the account Neil gave, and such was the story that met Duncan as he came home from Callander, whether he had gone early in the day.

Time passed on, and the shooting season brought many a visitor to Tam's cottage, for Neil's story was the romance of the year. He was still unable to walk, but his health was all right, and the doctors said he might get strong again in time. Neil never complained, nor could he, with such a nurse as Helen fluttering round him, propping him up with fragrant pillows stuffed with fresh gathered heather and bracken, gathered, too, by the little hands that were so strong and ready with their labor of love. It was only when pain kept him restless at night that the thought of being a cripple for life crushed him, and brought out all the training given him by a good mother, and the staunch religious feeling inherent in almost every Scottish heart, the spirit that gave the world what Alexander Pendeen called the "praying folk," who carried their religion triumphantly through those terrible days when a bloody scaffold was thought a good shelter.

It was nearly a month since the day Neil had been carried home from the Crag. Night had just come, still, warm, and almost like twilight. Tam was smoking his pipe preparatory to his early bed time, the women folk were knitting, and Neil lying upon a couch the laird's sister had sent him, was reading "Rob Roy" aloud, much to Tam's perplexity, who interrupted many times with denunciations against the text. Suddenly the open doorway was darkened, and Duncan stood in the doorway.

"Weel me, lad," cried Tam. "Ye're jist in time to hear the havers the bulk folk pit in prent about the McGregors. Read that again, Neil, that whar he says"——

But Duncan interrupted him—

"I dinna cross the door to hear, less read. I cam to speak about a tee, to tell ye"—and his voice grew louder and hoarser as he spoke—"to tell ye that ane ye liked's wool is a teer. We're n'frien's here," he said with a different voice, looking around.

"Aye, aye, man. Sit doon," said Tam, taking his pipe out of his mouth and turning to have a better look at Duncan. "Why, what ails ye, man?"

"Mickle ails me, Tam McGregor, and I cam on a gruesome errand. I have nam to tak' awa' ye're faith in man for evermair, and to shame a hypocrite wi' the fair truth."

Helen laid down her knitting and drew nearer Neil. Tam glanced at him took Neil's face was crimson, and his eyes, all dilated and eager, stared up at the great wild looking man glowing down upon him, who went on speaking.

"Neil says he slipped doon the Crag. He didna slip. An enemy——"

"Stop him, Helen," shouted Neil, trying to get up, but falling, he pushed the boy toward Duncan. "Stop him, for God's sake! The lad's mad. He doesn't know what he is saying. Don't listen to him, Tam. He is a fine fellow and you will hear me say it. Duncan, man, shake hands with me and do go quietly away, and let well enough alone."

Duncan's answer was to drop down upon his knees by Neil's side, and covering his face with his hands, sob aloud.

"Na, na, Neil, I canna let alane. I maun tell them. Let me bide, lad; it's the fittest place. And when I hae your forgiveness I'll gang on my knees to the Almighty; but I canna ask Him till I hae confessed my sin."

"Well, let me tell it, Duncan," said Neil, very gently laying his hand upon the kneeling man's shoulder.

"No!" cried the other, sternly; I'll not get the worst. Tam and Helen, I am a murderer, or as bad, for I had the thocht in my mind to take his life. Neil cut me out wi' you, Nelly. Mad wi' jealousy, I said we'd gang to the Reiver's Crag and fight, the best man shall win ye. Neil wad hardly gang till I tellt him I'd ca' him through the country side for a coward, and then he went. But when I got to the top o' the Crag the deil got possession o' me, and catchin' him unaware I hurled him ower, thinking dead men tell nae tales. I never thocht o' the colley. When I heerd tell he was found, I was like to gang mad. Every fut I thocht was a pollis, but when the days passed and Neil never tauld, it was than a." The burnin' coals were heaped on my head burnin' and smotherin' i' the brain, till this gloaming the thocht came to make a clean breast and then gang awa' wher I'd never see a kenned face till the day o' judgment. Ca' Neil, man, ye ken what loving lies; but even you canna tell what my heart was, and how neither blood nor damnation were any worth if I could only ha' won her here. Ye canna forgive me, Nellie, lass, for I hae made him a cripple, but just say, 'Duncan, I'll ask the Lord to forgie ye,' an' I'll gang away content."

Tam was the last to hold out the hand of forgiveness; but he, too, did so at last, and then Duncan went away.

Upon the top of the bank he turned, and, with cap in hand, stood looking at the cottage. "Puir lad! he's prayin', maybe," thought Mrs. McGregor, who had followed her old favorite to the door.

Two years afterward, and a few weeks after Neil and Helen were married, a letter came to the former—a letter written by a comrade of Duncan's—and then they knew for the first time that he had enlisted, and going to India with one of the gallant regiments afterward nicknamed "Sir Colin's pettitoats," the poor heart-broken lad had found the death he coveted before the walls of Lucknow, and was lying mortally wounded in the hospital, where he dictated his first and last letter to Neil, bidding him good-bye, and telling him to let the Balquhidder folk know the true story of the Reiver's Crag.

The citizens of Alton, Ill., are arranging to erect a monument to the martyred Elijah P. Lovejoy. They designate the 7th of November, the 30th anniversary of his death, as an appropriate occasion for laying the corner stone;

A ferryman, whilst plying over a river which was only slightly agitated, was asked by a timid lady in his boat, whether any person were ever lost in that river. "Oh no," said he, "we always find 'em a-jin the next day."

LEFFEL'S AMERICAN DOUBLE TURBINE WATER WHEEL.

THESE WHEELS unequalled, as proved in the United States of the North-West, have fully tested on the coast, more than forty being in use at this date, driving all kinds of machinery; Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills, Woolen Factories, &c., &c.

On account of the late calamity to the OREGON IRON WORKS we have lost a few Wheels, but of these since we have a good supply, therefore those contemplating using the Wheel need not be disappointed, but forward their order at once, accompanied with the CASH, which we note need more than the Wheels.

We cheerfully refer to all using our wheels, and are assured that all will affirm that our wheels accomplish all and even more than we claim for them.
